AUTHOR'S/SPONSOR'S STATEMENT OF INTENT

Current Texas law grants a constable 270 days after election to become licensed as a peace officer. If a constable fails to do so, the sole means of removing him or her from office is by action of the local county commissioners court. Due to local political considerations, commissioners courts are often reluctant to take such action. Consequently, those who are not licensed as peace officers continue to operate with the powers of arrest and additional authorities inherent in law enforcement.

H.B. 1588 requires the Office of the Attorney General to institute a quo warranto proceeding to remove a constable who does not obtain a peace officer's license. It also requires a person serving as constable to have a peace officer's license or an associate's degree conferred by an institution of higher education at the time the person takes office. H.B. 1588 requires constables to take part in peace officer administrator's training, similar to that required of police chiefs, within 48 months of taking office.
