AUTHOR'S / SPONSOR'S STATEMENT OF INTENT

Legislation passed in the 80th Legislature, Regular Session, 2007, moved oversight of the towing and vehicle storage industry from the Texas Department of Transportation to the Texas Department of Licensing and Regulation (TDLR). The move provided increased oversight and a better regulatory system for the industry. However, several issues have arisen from the transition.

The Occupations Code provides for several types of licenses for a towing operator, including an incident management license, a private property license, and a consent tow operator's license. In addition to the towing operator license, Section 2303.101 (License Required), Occupations Code, requires a license holder in certain circumstances to also hold a vehicle storage facility license. Therefore, towing operators are required to hold two separate licenses from TDLR. This is burdensome to both the license applicant and TDLR, which is required to run two background checks on the same person.

In addition to the towing licenses, Sections 2308.153(b) (relating to requirements for an incident management towing operator's license), 2308.154(b) (relating to requirements for a private property towing operator's license), and 2308.155(b) (relating to requirements for a consent towing operator's license), respectively, require an applicant for a towing operator's license to also have a Texas driver's license. There are towing operators who live in bordering states, such as Arkansas, who work in Texas. These operators are required to obtain a Texas driver's license merely for the purpose of applying for a towing license with TDLR. There is also currently no temporary training license for those who are training to operate a tow truck.

S.B. 702 amends current law relating to the regulation of the towing and storage of vehicles.
