AUTHOR'S / SPONSOR'S STATEMENT OF INTENT

Women with ovarian cancer face a high mortality rate largely because the disease has vague symptoms and the manifestation of the disease is not recognized until it is too late. This is compounded by the circumstance that women are not regularly screened for the disease in the same manner as for cervical cancer and breast cancer. These factors result in the disease being diagnosed almost always at an advanced stage, making it very difficult to successfully treat.

Early detection and intervention can significantly increase the odds of permanent remission. The CA 125 blood test is a promising diagnostic tool, especially when used in conjunction with an ultrasound if the CA 125 is found to be elevated, indicating the possible presence of ovarian cancer.

S.B. 2003 addresses these concerns by improving ovarian cancer screening practices. The bill amends Chapter 1370, Insurance Code, to add ovarian cancer as a detection test.

As proposed, S.B. 2003 amends current law relating to health benefit plan coverage for ovarian cancer screening.
